The totalitarian, morally-bankrupt nation of Australia has introduced a controversial new Ministry that specifically targets MEN and seeks to change MAN's behavior. The Premier of Victoria - Jacinta Allan - has appointed a man named Tim Richardson to become the nation's first Parliamentary Secretary for Men's Behavior Change.

The new Ministry will seek to monitor, control and change men's behavior throughout Australia. The Ministry will use online tools to make men have respectful dialogue with women, etc. To get the population behind this social engineering program, there must be a manufactured crisis. Prime Minister Anthony Albanese and the corporate state media claim the country is experiencing a "national crisis" of "gender-based violence." The Prime Minister suggests that all men should take responsibility for this crisis, and the government must act now!

Real masculinity is a threat to the cowardice within totalitarian governments

Totalitarian governments like Australia's are already rife with weak men and women who seek to restrain, control and abuse others. Throughout the past five years, Australia has proven to be a nation of cowardly leaders, regardless of gender. Not only has this government

At the heart, this social engineering program seeks to control public behavior and suppress dissent, feminizing the culture and penalizing men for becoming bold, strong leaders who speak out against injustices. The Australian government is also trying to feed gender warfare, to foster distrust between the sexes, while simultaneously suppressing the population further.

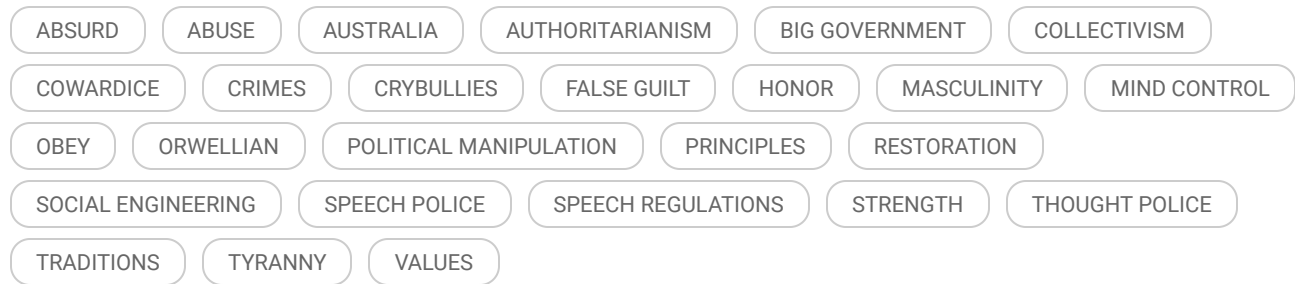

The New Ministry emphasizes the need to alter men's internet discourse, changing their attitudes towards women, transgenders and gays, and making them more submissive to the social engineering programs. This effort represents a broader agenda to regulate online speech and control how men think. The targeting of men serves as a pretext to bolster authoritarian measures, under the guise of protecting transgenders and other minorities. A divided and emasculated population, where men are forced to be docile and silent on controversial issues, is a population that can be ruled as slaves.

Masculine men are the answer to Australia's woes

To streamline their totalitarian agenda and maintain control, the ruling elite want to target the segment of the population most likely to challenge their authority: traditionally masculine men. Masculinity is now a threat, because the Australian government is long overdue for reform, for a return to sound principles and ethics. The ruling elites have abandoned constitutional principles, and no longer possess any moral authority on any relative cultural issues. Historically, masculinity has been the driving force behind these changes, defending
